

In Our Neighborhood - our exhibition recommendations 16th of July 2019

In these crazy times it is quite rare to spend a warm summer evening going to openings, even in Tel Aviv's art hub - Kiryat HaMelacha.

Thus when the opportunity presents itself, we can't help but to recommend the exhibitions that will open this upcoming weekend

This Thursday you will have the opportunity to view early paintings by Yonatan Ullman in a new light at his new solo show - 'Eitan'.

'Eitan', Yonatan Ullman's solo exhibition Curator: Daniel Tzadka Cohen

Yonatan Ullman, detail from the painting sequence 'The Right Hand Cluster' (FORCE, 2012), industrial paint and tape on canvas, 192x132 cm

*“Yonatan Ullman is expecting a son this October.
He will be named - Eitan”*

This sentence is written in pencil directly on the wall at the entrance to Ullman’s new solo exhibition.

The show continues Ullman’s energetic, masculine and powerful work. As is always the case with him though, parallel to his relentless courage and euphoric masculinity, a sentimental side is present - even as he investigates global history, his personal biography is revealed.

His new exhibition plays with this twice over - Ullman re-exhibits existing works from his iconic series ‘FORCE’, but sheds a different light on them within the context of his new show.